

Small drops of moisture fall to dampen the dust of desire, and by opening the gateway of nirvana, fanning the wind of liberation.

Ridding themselves of the heat of worldly passions, they bring about the cooling quality of the Dharma.

Every existence is quiescent, neither produced nor extinguished, neither large nor small, uncorrupted and unconditioned,

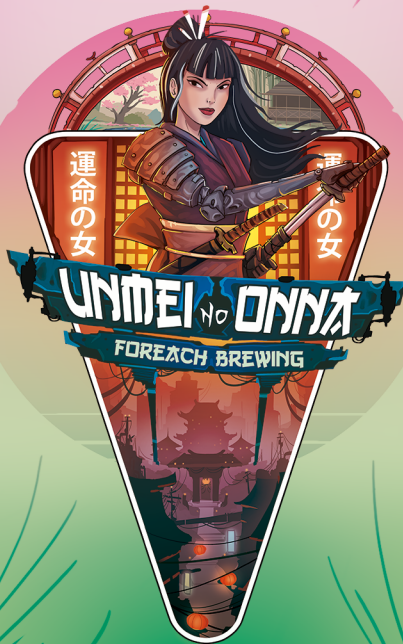

Beginning with ignorance and ending with old age and death, all these derive from birth.

With wisdom as bright as the sun and the moon and timely use of skillful means, they make the enterprise of the Great Vehicle prosper and grow.

Always living in the blessedness of a reality that is fine and wonderful, with immeasurable great compassion, they save the living from suffering.

You have extinguished the suffering.
You have completed what must be done.
